I grew up on the East Coast where quality sushi is both abundant and affordable. After getting accustomed to such luxuries, moving to the middle of the country really shocked me. Sometimes it feels like finding trustworthy and reasonably-priced sushi in Denver is harder than just catching a fish myself.

However, I refuse to give up my beloved rainbow rolls. Thankfully, happy hours, buffets and lunch specials have come to my rescue. Even the best Denver sushi places offer up deals. Our guide will tell you when to go to and what to order at top sushi restaurants to keep your wallet and stomach satisfied.

Blue Sushi Sake Grill

When: Monday – Saturday, 3 – 6:30 p.m., Friday – Saturday, 10:30 p.m. – 12 a.m. and Sunday, 12 – 8 p.m.

Where: 1616 16th St., Denver

The Lowdown: Although Blue Sushi Sake Grill is a chain, it still has some high-quality food, and perhaps because it is a chain, it has even more quality deals. During happy hour, several of its nigiri and hand rolls are 25 or almost 50 percent off. Unlike most restaurants, it doesn't just offer discounts on their basic tuna and California rolls. In fact, the happy hour menu exclusively consists of some of their more complex nigiri and roll creations.

The deals only get more delicious when you discover the late night weekend happy hours. On Fridays and Saturdays, a second happy hour goes from 10:30 p.m. until midnight — ideal for satisfying all of your late night munchies. On Sundays, their happy hour lasts a full eight hours until 8 p.m.
